

Instructors:

Jocelyn Edelstein has studied modern dance, hip hop, kundalini yoga, Afro Brazilian Folkloric Dance and Capoeira for the past 10 years. Edelstein's studies have taken her from Oregon to Brazil and back again where she has taught classes and workshops for ages ranging from 3 to 80 years old. Edelstein is the founder of the Urban Body Project, a multi-media organization that explores the relationship between dance and community. UBP is currently in post production for their upcoming feature length documentary, Believe The Beat. More info on her classes can be found at www.danceharvest.com.

Annie Naranjo-Rivera has taught both visual and performing arts classes for over 10 years. She has been blessed with the opportunities to act, direct, stage manage, choreograph, and participate in costume and set design for numerous children's theaters. Naranjo-Rivera currently runs the drama program for Nea-kah-nie Middle School, where the children are preparing to put on The Wonderful Wizard of Oz this upcoming spring. In addition, former Hoffman Center Board member Naranjo-Rivera, has taught everything from playwriting, to improvisational acting, to voice with children of all ages in both Clatsop and Tillamook counties. Naranjo-Rivera runs the Hoffman Center's annual Art and Drama Camp for Kids, which will be headed into it's fourth summer this year. Information about past classes and theater performances can be found at www.hoffmanblog.org.

Intro to the Stage for Kids!

Wednesdays, 2:30-3:30pm
Feb 8th-29th

Ages: This class is open to pre-school children ages 3-4 (or with instructor's approval).

Class Description: This entry level class, taught by instructor Annie Naranjo-Rivera, will allow kids to play and explore the imaginary world of the stage. We will learn about storytelling and create some of our own costumes and masks to tell famous stories. Each child will learn to develop their own unique "voice" on the stage and have a blast doing it. We will play improvisational acting games, practice movement and sing with instruments.
